THE WAR.

In Europe, still goes on. The Prussians have reached the environs of Paris. The bombardment of Metz and Strasburg continues. Napoleon is treated as an Emperor, at Wilhelmshohe; and it is exceedingly probable that, in case of the final success of the Prussians in the conquest of France, he will be reinstated in his Imperial government. Russia and Austria are hobnot-bing, and threatening intervention. Italy is rocking in the throes of revolution. Spain has recognized the French Republic. England still growls and 'sympathizes' with both sides. And the end will be-who can tell?

WATHENA, KAS., Aug. 5, 1870. Messrs. Miller & Klime, agents for Russell's Lie Sano. I have had the Rheumatism, off and on, for many years. Last Fall I had a very severe attack, completely paralyzing my right side. My sufferings still increased until about two months ago, when my left side became similar to my right, perfectly dead. At this time I got one bottle of Russel's Lie Sano from you, and have used that and part of another. To-day my left side is perfectly well, and my right gradually better—simost well. I never felt freer from pain in my life, and am condident of being fully restored. I can cheerfully recommend its use to all similarly afficied. Yours truly,
